What's changing under GDPR?

Publication Date: May 2018

Summarised below are the key changes arising from the implementation of the EU General Data Protection Regulation ('GDPR'), which takes effect on 25 May 2018.

Our obligations to you with regard to your personal data

Where we collect and process your personal data, we will provide you with information including:

- Our purposes for processing your personal data;
- The legal grounds on which we will process your personal data;
- Our retention period for that data; and
- Whom your data will be shared with.

Your rights in respect of your personal data

As a "data subject", you have the right to obtain the following:

- Confirmation of what personal data of yours we collect and process;
- Information about the purpose for which we process your personal data;
- Information about the recipients with whom the data may be shared; and
- Information about the period for which your personal data will be stored.

Additionally, in certain circumstances you may also have the following rights in relation to your personal data:

- The right to have your data erased;
- The right to have inaccurate personal data rectified;
- The right to restrict or object to its processing;
- The right to data portability, which means the right to receive some personal data in a structured, commonly used and machine-readable format and/or request we transmit that data to a third party; and
- The right to complain to the ICO if you believe that your data is being processed unlawfully or without your consent.
